Lew Tendler Will Be Leonard's Most Dangerous Opponent Since Knocking Out Kilbane LEONARD WAS MARVEL IN K.O. OVER KILBANE

EASY SAILING SINCE

By LOUIS H. JAFFE

FOR a period of four years, from the time Benny Leonard became the lightweight champion of the world, bringing the crown back to the head of an American when he knocked out Fred Welsh, the Briton, in nine rounds in New York, no serious contender stood in the Gotham gloveman's way until Lew Tendler, of Philadelphia, loomed in his path. Lew had been knocking on Leonard's throne for two years, and finally Promoters Taylor and Gunnis linehed a Tendler-Leonard battle for the Phillies' Ball Park here August 12.

It was on the night of May 28, 1917.
that the coronation of Leonard occurred.
Johnny Kilbane had had a shot at the lightweight charmoloushin a few weeks. Johnny Kilbane had had a shot at the lightweight championship a few weeks previously, but the featherweight title-holder was unable to stow away Welshim a ten-round, no-decision match. Then Leonard came along and stopped the Englishman

Then Leonard came along the Englishman.

Benny did not follow in the footsteps of most champions by placing himself in the limelight as a circus performer or actor. Instead, he proved himself a real fighting title-holder from the outset. And Leonard did not pick on set-ups, plants or bimboes, as the sayings go. Less than two months after annexing the title Leonard was matched with Kilbane, and this really has been the last crucial contest for Leonard.

Tendler Has Chance to win. After the bell sounded starting hostilities it ensued in a one-sided conflict and so it finished.

The beginning of the end came in the condition of the head by Leonard made Kilbane linch. The Kilbane rooters were willing to sell their bets for a dime, as it were, because it easily could be seen that it was only a matter of a few counds before Leonard would be a devisive victor.

The Macks on their last away trip performed brilliants.

But Kilbane would not be denied. forming the same capers. As in the previous two rounds, the mailer man came from his corner shoot. ches for the iaw.

for a moment, evidently giving himself a chance to think what next to do. Suddenly the lightweight champ pulled himself loose from Kilbane, and as the latest with George Smith setting out a ter came tearing in, missing with a wild over-hand right hand. Leonard oumped in a short left hook to the body.

Then a series of lefts and rights, all rrific punches, made Kilbane try t ade of body smashes by switching with a victous right uppercut to the chin. Kilbane collapsed, going to his knees and grabbing Leonard around the ankles with both arms. The featherweight champ was in a daze, and he proved it regaining his equilibrium without

Towel Ends Match

As Kilbane straightened, hardly able old up his arms, a right by Leonard to the jaw almost turned the Cleveland man around. Then a short left hook to the chin and a round-house right-hand wallop behind the head made Kilbane punch-drunk. He staggered and tottered, almost falling to his haunches rgainst the ropes. Another solid punch, of which Leonard surely was capable, would have knocked Kilbane cold. And Johnny never had been counted out in his life.

So there was only one thing left to de by Jimmy Dunn, Kilbane's manager and pal at that time, and Dunn did it. He grabbed a water-soaked towel from the bucket at his feet outside the corner of the ring and flung it several feet high between the ropes, just as the end of the round neared. In fact the bell sounded, ending the round even before the towel, sign of accepted defeat, landed on the resin-covered floor. That finished Kilbane, world's featherweight champion, as a contender for erweight champion, as a contender for the lightweight title. He had been out-boxed, outfought, outclassed and out-

Since then Leonard has pushed aside a number of good men, but none was figured as having a possible chance of dethroning him. Now Tendler is a little more than a week away from an opportunity to win the lightweight laurels, and the hard-hitting southpaw, recognized as the foremost contender for Leonard's title, has a good chance of making ring history.

Desires Game for Saturday

Tendler Never Stopped

Record books show that Benny Leonard, in the early days of his career, was knocked out in two different bouts, being stopped in four rounds by Joe Shugrue in 1912 and by Frankie Fleming in five rounds the following year. Since winning the championship Benny has been knocked down by Charley White and Ritchie Mitchell. Lew Tendler never has been counted out, but he has been dropped by Willie Jackson and Eddie Fitzsimmons. Jackson scored two knockdowns over Tendler, and there still are many fans who be-lieve that the Philadelphian was given a slow count, despite the fact several ringside critics, with stopwatches, upheld Frank O'Brien as having been fair in tolling.

Rollie hurled good ball yesterday, but the breaks were entirely against him. With two down in the ninth inning Strunk shot an easy grounder to Chick Galloway that would have been converted into the third and last out. Just as Chick reshed in to last out. Just as Chick rushed in to get the pellet it hit a stone with force enough to bound clear over his head for a single and Johnson, who was perched on third, ambled home with what proved the winning run.
